The Center for Architecture is a public facility for all interested in the built environment. With galleries, a lecture hall, resource center, library, meeting rooms and administrative offices for the American Institute of Architects New York Chapter and its charitable affiliate, the New York Foundation for Architecture, the Center sponsors on-going exhibitions, lectures, symposia, and tours. For more information go to www.aiany.org.

In celebration of the upcoming ten-year anniversary of the U.S. General Services Administration Design Excellence Program, the American Institute of Architects New York Chapter will host its first national exhibition at the Center for Architecture. Civic Spirit: Changing the Course of Federal Design features twenty federal projects from around the country. The exhibition explores how GSA's Design Excellence Program has redefined the architect and artist selection and building design and construction processes. These improvements have greatly expanded the architectural opportunities for federal office buildings, judicial facilities, and border stations and chart the course for the design of public buildings around the nation.

A series of accompanying public programs and workshops will educate practitioners and the public about the Design Excellence Program. The evening events will feature architects and artists discussing current projects on view, detailing goals and issues involved in designing federal projects. The morning workshops will bring GSA officials and national peers together to describe in detail how architects, artists, engineers, landscape architects, contractors and consultants participate in the various activities of the Design Excellence Program. Go to www.aiany.org/civicspirit for more information or to RSVP.
