

The Center for Architecture Grants and Scholarships for 2008

Douglas Haskell Awards for Student Journalism

Purpose

To encourage the study of fine writing on architecture and related design subjects and to foster a regard for intelligent criticism among future professionals. This year's award will be given to one or more student writers or student publications fulfilling these objectives.

Award

A single award of $5,000 will be awarded

Eligibility

Any article in a current publication, print or online, focused on design issues by a student enrolled in a NAAB accredited school of architecture or related program such as art history, interior design, urban studies and landscape architecture. Publications released before 2006 and writing assignments for class work and not intended for print are ineligible for submission.

Submission Requirements

Submit twelve copies of the following:

- A cover page with full contact information (name, address, phone and email), title of essay or story and title and date of publication
- Copies of the publication (original copies not necessary), or if the article has not yet been published, submit twelve copies of the article and a letter from the editor stating the intended date and place of publication; if the article has been published on a web based publication, please submit printed pages from the website along with the web address. Each entrant may submit up to two submissions.
- Entries are to be accompanied by a concise statement describing the purpose of the publication, its intended audience, and the school and degree program that the entrant is enrolled.
- One copy of each submission will be retained for the Center for Architecture records
- Provide a self-addressed and stamped envelope for award notification; copies of work cannot be returned.
- A $15 entry fee paid payable to the Center for Architecture Foundation
